Artist Bio.

Pat Patterson Hauck has studied photography and design at Rochester Institute of Technology, International Center of Photography, Maine Photographic Workshops and Parson's School of Design. Her introduction to infrared photography totally changed the way she looked through the viewfinder. Even though the film required special handling and testing, the surrealistic images compelled her to continue working in this medium. Once Pat began working in a digital darkroom, she expanded her infrared studies by experimenting with various digital cameras and filters, eventually having cameras physically converted to infrared.

Exhibiting infrared prints in juried Art and Photographic shows on Long Island and NYC, Pat has earned awards from Huntington and East End Arts Councils, participated in the New York Foundation of the Arts MARK program, a statewide consortium of visual artists, and was an international finalist in the Worldwide Photography Gala's Julia Margaret Cameron Award.
